May Chapter

Georgia gets in trouble in school for getting the only male teacher to talk about "his balls," and giggling hysterically about it. By the end of the May chapter, Georgia says she is mad at God, but then changes her mind and says she will believe in God if something nice happens to her. The objectives of these questions are to discuss how accurate Georgia's perception of her own level of maturity really is and what Georgia is blaming God for, and why.

1. How mature does Georgia believe she is? Why does she think so?

---

---

---

---

2. In what ways has Georgia matured since the beginning of the novel? In what ways is she still much the same?

---

---

---

---

---

3. Does anyone else perceive her differently? Why or why not? What would have to change in order for her to be perceived differently by others?

---

---

---

---

---

4. Why is Georgia mad at God at the end of the May chapter?

---

---

---

---

5. What other occurrences are there in the novel that make her feel this way about God?

---

---

---

---

6. Why does she believe that it is God who is doing these things to her? Do you think that this is a typical teenage response?

---

---

---

---

7. Do you think that Georgia means it when she says that she will believe in God if something good happens to her? Why or why not?
