

Short text within a larger project or database

Whitman, Walt. "Beat! Beat! Drums!" Project Bartleby Archive. Ed. Steven Van Leeuwen.

May 1998. Columbia U. 11 May 1999. <<http://www.bartleby.com/142/112.html>>.

Scholarly Project or information database

Center for Reformation and Renaissance Studies. Ed. Laura E. Hunt and William Berek. May

1998. U of Toronto. 11 May

2001. <http://CITD.SCAR.UTORONTO>CA/crrs/index.html>.

The Internet Movie Database. May 1999. Internet Movie Database Ltd. 11 May 1999

<<http://us.imdb.com>>.

Email Message

To document an email message, provide the following information:

- Author's name
- Subject line, in quotation marks
- Description of message that includes recipient (e.g., e-mail to the author)
- Date of sending

Jones, John. "How to Cite Information from the Web." E-mail to Tammy Smith. 10 Dec. 2002.

Other Web Sources

When documenting other Web sources – for example, an audio or film clip, a map, or a painting – provide a descriptive phrase (e.g., map) if needed.

"Methuen, Massachusetts." Map. U.S. Gazetteer. US Census Bureau. 4 Oct. 199.

<<http://www.census.gov/cgi-bin/gazetteer>>.

Note: If you still have questions regarding citation of sources, see your teacher. Alternatively, you could try an on-line style guide. Use a good search engine (www.teoma.com) and key in "MLA style guide."